Acknowledges Small Surplus

Resuming the cross-examination, At-Carusi attempted to show that Best was biased in his attitude oward the Commercial and First Naal, and that his reports had been upfair to the companies. The witness aid his chief criticism was directed at the literature circulated by the companies, which he regarded as somewhat leading and deceptive.

He again acknowledged that the Commercial had a comparatively small surplus, even eliminating the Southern ng valuation, which has been the e of contention in the present con

Mr. Best said that fire insurance cor Mr. Best said that fire insurance com-panies generally regard District of Co-tembla risks as not especially hazard-ous, and with this admission as a basis, Attorney Carusi drew out the ad-ditional acknowledgment that this should be taken into consideration be-fore any one passes judgment upon a company which puts a portion of its eserve in real estate. This was done to the Commercial.

"Testing" Expert's Knowledge. Mr. Best adhered to his view that small companies have a hard time com peting with their larger rivals, and he sserted that small fire insurance comanies should automatically cease to write policies after assuming risks proportionate with their reserves. Mr. Carusl wanted to know "how, then, can such a company increase its reserve without the sale of stock?" and the expert said this was about the only way, mless stockholders subscribe additional

Mr. Easby-Smith began to ask questions concerning the Equitable and other New York companies. Congressman Redfield interjected the statement that he was a director in the Equitable, and would be glad to furnish the attorney all the information desired. Mr. Easby-Smith said he was "testing" the expert's knowledge of the business. Mr. Best left for New York when he concluded his two days' testimony, and Walter English, a Washington lawyer, was called to the stand. He testified briefly concerning a conversation he

Vivid Recollection of City Long Before War.

One of the old guard of Washington esidents passed away in Walter Montomery Pumphrey, who dled at the nome of his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Oliphant, 1406 Chapin street northwest, yesterday. For sixty-nine years he had resided in Washington, and was one of the very few "old timers" whose recollection of the city for two decades before the civil war was clear and vivid. Mr. Pumphrey was born in Mont gomery county, Md., eighty-six years ago, and came to Washington when seventeen years old. He entered the contracting business, but retired thirtyone years ago to enter the service of ss, asked Mr. Best if he had ever the Washington Aqueduct office.
